

Titus Yong
MBA 2000
Director
Ingenio

Titus Yong is the founder and director of Ingenio Pte Ltd, an education/training company that offers programmes on ingenuity/creativity and positive psychology. Ingenio is being supported by Creative Community Singapore, a nationwide initiative by Singapore's Ministry of Information, Communication, & the Arts (MICA).

Titus holds a master's degree from Harvard University after completing an interdisciplinary programme in education, psychology, and management. He conducted research on creativity under Prof Howard Gardner and interviewed many Nobel laureates. In addition, Titus is also a graduate of the NUS Business School where he completed his MBA in 2000.

He was previously the founding CEO of Emergenetics Asia Pte Ltd, a joint venture that provides brain-based psychometric tools and programmes through its network of over a hundred associates in a dozen Asian cities. Prior to that, Titus was a venture capitalist at Transpac Capital, a regional private equity firm. He was responsible for managing and evaluating investments in the technology and education companies.

Titus' other career experience includes being a process consultant at Andersen Consulting (renamed Accenture); he started his career with Schlumberger working on offshore oil and gas platforms.

Titus has served as Judge for Tan Kah Kee Young Inventors Award, FIRST Robotics, and global StartUp@Singapore business plan competition. He currently serves as Editor for the Harvard Club of Singapore.
